My visit at the National History Museum in London(1)

Last sunday, I visited the Natural History Museum in London. It was a great visit because they had an exhibition about dinosaurs. I went there with my older sister and our parents.

I was very excited about our trip because they showed the "Patagotitan" at the museum.

The "Patagotitan" was one of the biggest animals to ever walk the earth.

"Patagotitan" dinosaurs were 36 meters long and five meters tall. I learned a lot about how they found food, survived and where they lived. It was impressive to see how big the "Patagotitan" really was. The "Patagotitan" lived on earth around 100 million years ago.
